THINK20 INCEPTION CONFERENCE

T20 Inception Conference

13–14 January | New Delhi

Think20 India hosted its Inception Conference in New Delhi, featuring 14 task force meetings, 5 plenary sessions, 2 roundtables and saw over 250 participants from 17+ countries. The two-day conference featured panel discussions and breakout sessions for each task force. During the course of two days, members of each task force presented their ideas and priorities, as well as the plan of action.

The Think20 India Inception Conference laid the groundwork for what the seven task forces aim to achieve during India's Presidency. It involved groups of think tanks and research institutions that are a part of the Think20 process and members of the task forces.

The event was opened by Dr Samir Saran, Chair of the T20 India Secretariat and President of the Observer Research Foundation, who introduced the Think20's objectives and functions. He emphasised the importance of renewing friendships, strengthening the community, and building a network of believers who value G20 and see it as a medium to respond to the challenges that the world is confronted with, and who also see the benefits of friendships and working together.

The opening remarks were made by Amb. Sujan R. Chinoy, Chair of the T20 India Core Group, Chair of the T20 Task Force 3 and 7, and Director General, MP-IDSA. He emphasised the utilisation of well-known social media platforms and highlighted the need for inclusion of members from G20 and guest countries.

Amitabh Kant, G20 Sherpa for India, gave the opening speech on the current state of the world during India's presidency of the G20. Among the themes he addressed were, slowdown in the economy, post-COVID effects and role of gender in India's growth story. He argued that "India cannot grow at its sustained pace with women. It is impossible to drive the world today without taking care of female nutrition, maternal health, and learning outcomes. Without women in positions of leadership, development cannot take place." Echoing the sentiments Rohan Jaitley, T20 India Core Group member, emphasised the group's focus on inclusivity and representation, adding that they have fostered new friendships and creative connections.

In his spotlight address, Mr Jayant Sinha, Chair, Parliamentary Standing Committee on Finance and Member of Parliament, India, argued that while the world was engulfed in several crises, climate action also demanded equal urgency and attention. Mr Sinha highlighted that net zero is net positive for all and “It is a win for the planet if we decarbonise, and a win for the Global South and the Global North if we can get the trajectory to reduce global warming issues”.

Closing the convenings at the T20 India Inception Conference on Day 1, Hardeep Singh Puri, Minister of Petroleum and Natural Gas, and Housing and Urban Affairs, Government of India traced back the journey of the inter-governmental forum to its establishment and highlighted the relevance of the grouping in addressing the gaps left by failures in multilateral organizations. India's Presidency of the G20: "LiFE, Resilience and Values" in a World of Geopolitics

7 June 2023

This panel discussion showcased the work of this unique T20 taskforce within the G20 process, highlighting its idealism as well as attention to Realpolitik. Sachin Chaturvedi, as Lead Chair of TF3, chaired and moderated the discussion, after providing a brief, framing statement. Wolfgang Niedermark provided the first input statement on the needs and constraints of German/ European business interests amidst increasing geoeconomic competition. The other three panelists (as members of the taskforce), Nicolas Buchoud, Seeta Prabhu, and Amrita Narlikar provided inputs on the different aspects of the taskforce that they see as key, and also the challenges they anticipate.

1. Long-term development investment framework must involve international financial institutions

- Considering its influence, G20 has the capacity to influence the participation of Bretton Woods institutions.
- With a substantial country membership—190 countries for the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and 189 countries for the World Bank—these institutions possess the necessary influence to establish such a framework.

2. Importance of private financial flows

- Developing countries must effectively harness private financial flows for long-term investment while maintaining macroeconomic stability
- the G20 forum could play a significant role in discussing and exploring possibilities, as it includes countries with large private investors.
- G20 can call for constructive cooperation between the North and the South to foster successful partnership models.

3. G20's role as the biggest multilateral forum

- Currently, the G20 represents the 20 biggest economies in the world, accounting for 80 percent of global GDP, 70 percent of international trade, and two-thirds of the global population
- By leveraging the G20 platform, developing countries can advocate for policies, initiatives, and resources that promote growth and sustainable development, particularly for developing countries facing financial constraints
